

MOTION PICTURE NOTES

Alice Brady lost a diamond ring recently and didn't say a word about it to her press agent. How different! Victor Moore has signed a contract with Klever Pictures, Inc., to act in one-reel comedies.

E. S. Moss, who produced "Three Weeks" and "One Day" for the screen, is to make a film of "One Hour." Later he'll likely tackle "One Minute" and "One Second." Then he'll have to quit.

Rita Jolivet is to give a tea, at which Rita Montebello, the chimpanzee that acted with her in "The Masque of Life," will be the guest of honor.

The Lasky photoplay, "Unprotected," in which Blanche Sweet is starred, deals with the evils connected with prison management and suggests reforms.

The Metro announces that the Metro-Rolfe production of "The Wager," with Emily Stevens as the star, will be released Nov. 13. It is a story of business life and the underworld.

Marguerite Clark has joined the Motion Picture Actors' Entertainment League for Prisoners, which arranges for the exhibition of films at penal institutions.

Viola Dana is working in a five-reel human interest drama called "Threads of Fate." It is being produced at the Rolfe studio under Eugene Nowland's direction.

Pauline Frederick was idle four weeks recently because a suitable photoplay could not be found for her, and she received $5,000 in salary for doing nothing.

Thirty-five branch managers for the Fox Film Corporation, from various parts of the United States, Canada and England, saw the big Fox film spectacle "A Laughter of the Gods" last night at the Lyric.

Subway and Tunnel Workers

The men who are building New York's great tunnel systems are exposed to heat, cold and damp and MUST wear proper clothing to protect their health.

The safest garment for men who are exposed to dampness and sudden changes of temperature is reliable WOOLEN underwear. That is why so many buy—
